SOMETHING IN THE FOREST.

THE HOT ZONE.
A part of Mount Dingo is a national park. Money tree is a distinctive feature of the forest.

The volcanic hills that rise above the valley are covered with dense forests of eucalyptus and gum trees. This region is known for its rich biodiversity, with a variety of unique wildlife species.

Mount Dingo is a popular destination for nature enthusiasts, offering a chance to explore the forest's natural beauty and biodiversity.
STREAM FLOWED DOWN IN A VELL. LOOKING ACROSS THE VALLEY, they would have seen the green forest for hours while the little stream wound through the valley, he walking for shelter, and they saw rock figures—he says something.

Somebody in the forest is holding himself tight, as if they were waiting for an answer. "What are you doing?" the other person asks, first of all. "Oh, I'm just thinking," the first person replies. "I'm thinking about how we can survive this." "And you think the door is locked, and the only way in is through the window?" "No, I'm thinking about what we can do if we need to get in." "But the window is broken, isn't it?" "That's true. But I'm thinking about how we can fix it." "You can't fix a broken window." "Yes, I can. I'm thinking about how we can use the broken glass to create a new window." "That's an interesting idea. But what if we can't find the right kind of glass?" "Then we'll have to think of another way." "Another way?" "Yes. We could try to find a different entrance." "But there's no other entrance." "That's true. But I'm thinking about how we can find a way in without breaking the window." "And how do you think we can do that?" "I'm not sure. But I'm thinking about how we can use the broken glass as a tool." "A tool?" "Yes. I'm thinking about how we can use the broken glass to create a tool that we can use to break the window." "That's an interesting idea. But how do you think we can do that?" "I'm not sure. But I'm thinking about how we can use the broken glass to create a tool that we can use to break the window." "And what if we can't find the right kind of glass?"
